

Lord of the Flies Group Dynamics Reflection

I think our class was successful in completing this assignment in the end because we had 6 well rounded groups that for the most part everyone was happy with. The very first thing we did was grab a talking stick. Then we picked one person for each group and then decided that we could place people who were complete opposite with the first person in a group. From there we kept adding and changing one person took the role of writing this down a small group did most of the final decisions but everyone contributed where they wanted to go. People naturally put themselves in roles and took responsibility that they wanted. Some people acted calm and some people didn't but it wasn't a surprise who those people were. The biggest challenge was having people in charge as well as everyone having a say. We all had different behaviours but I think all of it was very typical for a group of people solving a problem. We still could have been much calmer.