Generals Die In Bed Book Report Book Soundtrack and Photo Essay

BOOK SOUNDTRACK

1

Song: We Don't Have To Take Our Clothes Off

Artist: Ella Eyre

Scene: When the narrator and Gladys met and were spending all of their time together

I chose this song for this specific scene because it really explained the good time the two of them were having when they were falling in love. I feel that if I saw this scene in a movie, this song in the background would be the perfect fit. When I was reading the book, in my mind I thought of this scene almost like a montage of them going around the city and falling in love at the same time. This song really represents the scene and has the perfect tone, which is why I chose it.

2

Song: Protesters of the Earth

Artist: Thomas Bergerson

Scene: When half of Fry's legs come off and they have to leave him behind

The reason I chose this song is because it really fits in with this scene. There is so much action and powerful events happening and this song is very big and powerful as well. I feel that this scene and the song fit together really nicely, and although the scene ends very sadly, the song still represents how much was happening at the time.

3

Song: Supermarket Flowers

Artist: Ed Sheeran

Scene: Cleary dying in the hospital

The reason I chose this song is because it has so much emotion in it and it really represents the feelings in this scene. This scene was so upsetting, it was such a heartfelt moment, and this song is about his grandmother being ill in the hospital and passing away, which is very similar to the scene in the book. I have listened to this song for so long and when I read the book, and read this scene, I knew instantly that this was going to be the song I chose.

PHOTO ESSAY

I chose this picture because it shows how life in the trenches were. You always have to be alert about your surroundings, and make sure you know what's happening. Also, the trenches are very dirty and filthy, and you rarely get to clean yourself, and you can see in the picture that the the man's clothing is very dirty. I think that this picture really shows what life was like in the trenches.

I chose this picture because although there is so much sadness and many awful things and events that happened in World War 1, these soldiers are so happy and excited that they got something good out of it. Maybe they won a battle, or maybe they are just happy to make it out alive, but either way, they are still so confident and not one of them look upset in this photo

The reason I chose this picture is very similar to the first one, however, in this photo, all of the soldiers are ready for what is coming to them. They all have their guns ready and are alert and ready to go. When I saw this, I was thinking about what could be going through their heads. What could they be thinking of while this picture was being taken? This photo has a lot of emotion in it.

And lastly, I chose this photo because it is a young, beautiful couple that reminded me of the narrator and Gladys together falling in love! This picture also represents the loved ones that the soldiers had back home waiting for their return, and how all of the girlfriends or wives, and any family members of the soldiers loved them so much, and it must have been very heartbreaking to see them go and not know if they will return.
