Why Go Reusable?

The Problem

Plastic has become such a fact of life in our world that we don't even notice it anymore. It's used for thousands of purposes, and is supposed to be 'disposable,' but it isn't. Plastic waste could take over a thousand years to decompose, and it ends up in our landfills and oceans. Over a million tons of plastic is dumped into the ocean every year, killing hundreds of thousands of marine animals and aquatic birds.

What Can You Do?

You can help reduce how much plastic gets put into the ocean, by choosing to bring your own reusable packaging to these stores and establishments, and reducing the need for plastic waste.

Restaurants

As of June 12th, 2020, Vancouver Coastal Health is working on an initiative to allow reusable takeout containers. Once it launches, restaurants will be able to allow customers to bring in their own reusable containers for takeout orders.

However, it is possible to bring your own containers to most restaurants and take your leftovers home, as long as you transfer your own food from plate to container at the table.
