

The Set-Up

I believe the drawing I have created shows my understanding for this section and my personal principles. These principles make me the person I am today and when I embrace them, I am usually filled with happiness and satisfaction. Additionally, this activity made me realize just what type of principles I wanted to have. This is seen from the hearts representing kindness, a trait I want to even get better at, and the hammer, representing hard work, a trait I value quite a lot. Moreover, the holding of hand represents honesty, something that I'm not the greatest at and the signs in the bottom representing wisdom and knowing what decision to make. Finally, the flower represents for me at least, friendship, a thing that I want to very much hold onto for the rest of my life. Even though I know my life will be better if I follow these principles, there has been many times where I broke my code and went the path that seemed easier. I will try to live more closely to my principles by reminding myself the good they will bring me if I trust in them. Overall, I hope I can become a person who follows these principles.
