 http://komagatamarujourney.ca	A letter to Gurdit Singh from “Wilson & Grist”. The letters say that Indians can leave to Vancouver as long if they have their ticket and not in the military.	The sources tells us how Gurdit Singh planned to get the Indians to B.C and how he wanted to make sure he was wishing legal boundaries for his voyage.	This text is has explicit bias with it’s message in saying that Gurdit Singh will be able to take the Indians out of Hong Kong

This adds to the story by showing that Indians were most likely happy when they first arrived.

It's about how the passengers are dissatisfied with the captain treatment of them by lettering police on board and not having enough food and water.	This tell how the passengers suffered due to the captain and Canadian government.	It this text their is explicit bias due to the passengers being straight forward on what they want. This gives us a better idea on the perspectives of the passengers on the ship.

The source describes in detail how British Columbia police came and tried to force the Indians away through threats.	This tells the story by showing the inside on how the police came and tried to get rid of the Komagata Maru. It also shows the resistance of the Indians and how they very much did not want to leave even though they were starving.	In this text their is explicit bias due to it being very straightforward in the message by describing in detail the actions of the police and calling for change from Balwant Singh

 http://komagatamarujourney.ca	This is letter to Maloolm R.J Reid from W.D Scott. Concerning having their navy, Rainbow, used to protect the law and punish the passengers on the Komagata Maru.	Tell us the legal action taken by the government to enforce what they see as the law against the Komagata Maru	This text is more of implicit by sing the law to justify their actions. This tells us how the government of B.C didn't want to use "violence" but, would if they saw it necessary

 https://sacda.ca/index.php/Gallery/109 H.M.S Rainbow in Vancouver Harbour to watch over the 'Komagata Maru'	It is a photo of the H.M.S Rainbow watching over the Komagata Maru at the B.C harbour.	It tells us how B.C was starting to try to get rid of the Komagata Maru through their military.	This photos shows implicit bias due to it implying in my eyes the threat the Komagata Maru was to the Canadian government due to them needing the navy to intervene.
 http://komagatamarujourney.ca The Prime Minister's response	The Canadian prime minister's response to the attacks made on the Komagata Maru. He congratulates the effort taken and says that the law must be enforced.	This tells us how the leader of Canada saw the Komagata Maru existence in the B.C harbour as breaking the law.	I feel this response shows a implicit bias due to the prime minister saying that they need to enforce the law however, without "violence".

 https://sacda.ca/Detail/objects/9004 Copy of letter from Reid to W.D. Scott, re wires received and sent	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Letter to W.D. Scott from Reid concerning the Komagata Maru and the attempts to get the ship to leave. It talks in detail about the conflict between the Canadian government and military and the Komagata Maru.	It helps put the story into more context into what plan the military had to get rid of the Komagata Maru. Moreover, the document also contains the time each event happened and which people or groups were involved such as chief of police, H.H Stevens, commander rainbow and Captain Yamato.	I feel this source has a more implicitly bias due to the writer of letter believing that he sending the navy to take care of the Komagata Maru is justified.
