

Everyone has a worldview. My worldview is unique to me. Various parts of my life are what shape my worldview. For instance, I have grown up in a time where technology is a crucial part of society. Due to this, I believe technology is a vital part of my lifestyle. It is part of my school and it allows me to interact with the world. Another factor that influences me is where I am raised. I care deeply about the environment because I live in a very natural place that is surrounded by mountains, the forest and the ocean. I was also born into a climate crisis and I have always known that the environment is important. I care about equal rights because of my education and family values. Out of all of these variables, my family shapes my worldview more than anything else and I think that they are a great influence on me. My worldview is ever expanding and I am developing opinions that are shaped by the world around me.
