

Exploring evidence

Station 1: Library Books

- What type of source is this (primary or secondary)? Secondary
- Share one interesting fact you found in this source? Rasputin name means debauchery is Russian
- Why do we trust this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) it is a historically accurate source and it is not biased towards anyone
- What is potentially untrustworthy about this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) it is a secondary source so the author was not there.

Station 2: YouTube

- What type of source is this (primary or secondary)? Secondary
- Share one interesting fact you found in this source? Maria terisia retained leadership over the hapsburg dynasty after a war for it.
- Why do we trust this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) this is a popular YouTuber who has credit.
- What is potentially untrustworthy about this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) he is not a firsthand source and could have gotten wrong information.

Station 3: Website

- What type of source is this (primary or secondary)? Secondary
- Share one interesting fact you found in this source? The American civil war was the costliest war fought on American soil
- Why do we trust this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) history.com is normally a very trustworthy website
- What is potentially untrustworthy about this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) it is a website that can be prone to human mistake

Station 4: Textbooks

- What type of source is this (primary or secondary)? Secondary
- Share one interesting fact you found in this source? 65 percent of Markham residents are visible minorities
- Why do we trust this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) it is an old but credible source
- What is potentially untrustworthy about this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) it is an old source and could have outdated facts`

Station 5: Magazine

- What type of source is this (primary or secondary)? This article is a primary source
- Share one interesting fact you found in this source? Woman are happier or less stressed after eating at home
- Why do we trust this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence)
- What is potentially untrustworthy about this source? (be as specific as you can, and answer this one in a full sentence) it is a magazine made by other humans with no other trustworthy sources.

You are about to do a research project and sources will be an important part of your product. Consider the 5 types of sources you just checked out. What source do you trust the most? Why? What sources do you think help you to learn about a topic the best? Why?

The source I think that I trust the most is the website. The reason for this is because websites can always be updated unlike books. With a website if the information is wrong you can help critique it. The final reason is websites can tap out of many sources and fast, this can give links to other credible websites. The source that I think helps me learn the best is also the websites. The reason for this is because website can connect to other sites and keep up to date. It can also help me learn by connecting videos and pictures.